Description:

Politically incorrect, comprehensively unscientific, and exceptionally funny, this guidebook identifies—and pokes fun at—the people of the Rainbow Nation. After sorting out the labels Black, English Whites, Afrikaners, and Coloreds, the discussion pushes on to more difficult questions: Why should you never give a White woman a white-gold engagement ring? Why do Indian men always play sports in jeans? and How do Colored gangsters fare in the navy?

Stereotyping is politically not correct (this book doesn't claim to be politically correct, of course, as the title points out), but it has its advantages: women do well to stay away from bulky hunks with saved heads, scars and tattoos (although not all of them will be rapists), while humorists need stereotypes for their jokes. So don't expect any subtlety from this book and don't read it if you are offended by remarks that black people have thick lips or all black people know how to dance (and all Brits don't). Having lived in South-Africa for four years, I had a lot of hey, I never realized that, but now that you say... experiences. And a lot of fun, as the book was a feast of recognition too. Because that is the point with stereotypes: they always contain at least some truth.
